Electric Gates In Service At Mokena

The electric gates and flashers at the Mokena depot and Wolf Road crossings went into operation for the first time Tuesday afternoon.

Harry Schoen who has been flagging at the depot crossing and Anton Benson who has been flagging at the Wolf Road crossing since July 1929, have both been given flagging jobs at the Center street crossing of the Rock Island in Joliet.

The flag shanty at the depot crossing was an old land mark having been located in the same spot for about 45 years. A tragedy in which a young woman was killed by a fast train at this crossing about 45 years ago caused the placing of a flagman at this crossing which before that time was unprotected.

The old flag shanty was often a refuge in cold weather when commuters would dash in to get warm while catching the early morning trains.

The flagmen who served at the depot crossing were: Patrick Brennan, Thomas Kiniry, Paul Rinke, Sr. Ferdinand Tonn, Harry Schoen.

The new gates are a big improvement and afford 24 hour protection to the public.

The depot crossing flag shanty was given to Mr. Schoen who sold it for a coal shed to a party in the Bartlett subdivision.

Duck Banded At Orland Shot In Minnesota

A young mallard drake which was banded by John Jedlicka at the McGinnis Slough Wild Life Refuge in Orland Park in August was shot in Pierce Lake, Minn. in September. The following interesting item appeared in the Fairmont, Minnesota Sentinel of October 16 regarding this bird:

Out at Pierce Lake the opening day of the season, Sept. 20, Charley Williams shot a young mallard drake, this year's hatch.

The bird was banded and Charley, being a good sportsman, reported the incident and the number to the Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Washington.

Today he received acknowledgment and the information the bird had been banded less than a month before by John Jedlicka, Orland Park, Ill.

Evidently these mallards do quite a lot of skylarking around the country, this one having in so short a time traveled a long distance not in line of migratory flight. This is the third banded duck known to be shot at Pierce Lake, the second shot by Mr. Williams.

Mr. Jedlicka and Gordon Pearsall operate banding traps for the Illinois Natural History survey in McGinnis slough of the Cook County forest preserve district in Orland Park, report that mallard flight is behind schedule according to their records.

At this time last fall (thru Oct. 23) they had trapped 769 mallards in the slough near Orland Park. So far this season only 688 mallards have been banded, providing an alibi for the hunters who have brought down few of the prized big ducks during the first 10 days of the season.

Birds Are Migrating Later

The fact that fewer mallards have been trapped indicates only, that the birds are migrating later than last season, not necessarily that there will be fewer birds during the entire season. Banding records kept by Pearsall and Jedlicka show that the height of the mallard migration last season was the first week in November, with a second peak the third week in November.

The popularity of the bluewinged teal as an early season target this year is reflected in the Pearsall-Jedlicka records. Many hunters have found these two species more abundant than usual in the marshes. At Orland Park they have banded 1,493 bluewings this year compared to 976 last season.

Pintails Show Increase.

The pintails show a larger percentage increase—78 this year compared to only 24 before October 23 last year. There has been a big drop in bandings of wood ducks, with only 114 of these birds taken this season compared with 297 last year.

Pearsall and Jedlicka have been ing hunters to watch the legs of all the ducks they bag, and report banded birds to the United States fish and wildlife service, Washington, 25 D. C. On the basis of these returns the birds' migration routes and other scientific data is possible to report.

Republican Rally at Frankfort Next Wednesday

Final plans have been made for the big Republican rally which will be held in the Frankfort school auditorium next Wednesday evening Nov. 1, at 7:30 o'clock. This meeting was first announced to be held in the Village hall in Frankfort but due to the lack of sufficient oil to heat that building for extra meetings, it was changed to the above place.

Good speakers have been secured so that it will pay anyone to attend and hear the issues of this trying time explained.

Speaking for the national issue will be Judge Roscoe C. South, circuit judge of Wateka, Ill. Judge South is a most interesting speaker and presents his subject in a plain and concise manner.

Judge J. V. Bartley, circuit judge of Joliet, will speak for a few minutes on casting your ballot. This is a timely subject, in view of the fact that many people lose their vote due to improperly marking their ballot.

States Attorney James Burke of Joliet will speak on the two amendments to our State Constitution which will appear on the ballot this year to be voted for or against.

Other Will County Candidates will be present and introduced. In order to add to the interest of this meeting a number of entertainment is being planned and refreshments will be served free at the close.

This meeting is for the men and women and is sponsored by the Frankfort Township Republican Club with Mrs. Herbert Folkers and Mrs. Wm. Semmler of Mokena, chairmen.

This year it is patriotic to attend political meetings and become acquainted with the serious issues which confront our country today.

Don't come alone, fill your car with neighbors and friends. To Mokena Territory People: If you can and want to attend this meeting and have no car or other way of conveyance, please call Mrs. Semmler, Mokena 2792 and steps will be taken to secure a way to go. If you have a car, want you please fill it with your friends and neighbors and attend the meeting.

EXPLANATION OF AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION

In the left hand column of the large ballot which voters will receive on election day, November 7, they will be asked to check a "yes" or "no" besides a question which reads, "For proposed amendment to Section 8 of Article 10 of the Constitution."

Knowledge of the proposed amendment is necessary for an intelligent consideration by the voter. Every voter should vote on this proposition, but not unless he is fully cognizant of what the proposition is about. For this reason a recital of some of the facts may be of great value in guiding the voter on election day. The State Constitution, which was drawn up in 1870, provides that "no person having once been elected to the office of sheriff or treasurer shall be eligible to said office for four years after the expiration of his term." The amendment would change that provision to read "and they (all officers) shall hold their respective offices for the term of four years, and until their successors are elected and qualified." Thus by passing the amendment the votes would permit county treasurers and sheriffs to succeed themselves.

In 1870 when our forefathers drew the constitution they had very good reasons for inserting the restriction, inasmuch as it was a safety measure to protect public funds which were then inadequately protected. Today the general public would not think of placing a treasurer or sheriff in office without first providing surety bonds and regular audits. This precaution is not only taken in the case of those offices, but also with all public officials who handle public funds. This includes the county clerk and the various court clerks, who during certain periods hold great amounts of public funds and yet enjoy the privilege of succeeding themselves. It is reasonable to assume then, that the law has been outmoded and certainly discriminating against holders of the two offices. It's like forcing some people to use the transportation of 1870 and let others in similar positions travel a la 1944.

TEXAS MAN BRINGS PRIZE STEERS TO CHICAGO MARKET

Clem Geuther a former Frankfort man, who now lives in Panhandle, Texas visited with local friends and relatives last week. He had shipped in four car loads of white faced steers to the Chicago stock yards and stopped over for a few days before returning to Texas. He reports very good conditions in the stock market and has been raising a large herd of steers.

SNUFFY Stirnweiss, the bounding Yankee second baseman, rates double ranking as a combination baseball and football star. Snuffy at North Carolina university was the tar heel ace from the Bronx, one of the best backs that ever galloped and threw passes for Carolina glory. Now he has proved to be one of the best young ball players that Joe McCarthy ever handled, especially on offense where he is a run-a-way cheetah around the bases and better than .300 at the plate.

Grantland Rice

The Stirnweiss claim to double fame brought up an old argument recently that began with this question—

"Who was the best combination football and baseball player in the history of the big leagues?"

There are more than a few who belong in this contest. First of all, there was Christy Mathewson, Bucknell's star back and the Giants' greatest right-hander. A trifle later on we had Big Orvie Overall of California and the Cubs. Eddie Collins was a fine Columbia quarterback before he became one of the top second basemen of all time.

Certainly no one could rake up a list along these lines and leave off Frank Frisch, the 145-pound Fordham flash and one of the best ball players of his or any other time. We can offer you another in the person of Spud Chandler, Georgia's star kicking and running back and the Yankees' 1943 ace.

Lou Gehrig was another Columbia football star, whose fine gridiron record was overshadowed by his baseball fame. And no one can overlook Mickey Cochrane, a triple-threat performer of high merit at Boston university and one of the three best catchers I've ever seen. Cochrane was All-America calibre in every way.

And there was Jim Thorpe, only a fair big leaguer, but football's finest back, and Ernie Nevers of Stanford and the Browns who was as good a back as any coach could ask for.

The Hot Parade

There must have been a few others, but even this collection shows the hot parade Stirnweiss has joined — Mathewson, Overall, Collins, Frisch, Chandler, Cochrane, Gehrig, Thorpe and Nevers.

But the main question still remains unsettled—"If 100 points were awarded for baseball skill and the same for football ability, who would finish on top?"

Mathewson, Gehrig, Cochrane, Frisch and Chandler head the baseball list. Thorpe and Nevers were the two leading football players from the group. In the combined ranking we find Frisch, Chandler, Stirnweiss, Cochrane and Overall well up the ladder.

My guess is that for combined ability in both games Frisch wouldn't be too far away from the main gate. But he would be well pressed by Overall, Chandler and Cochrane who were also high up in both branches of the football-baseball tree.

Nelson's Swing

Byron Nelson, the Texas whiz, has already cracked all past money and bond-winning records for competitive golf. Before the year is out he is sure to pass the $50,000 mark, which is a Mt. Everest altitude in the ancient and honorable pastime of pasting the pill.

Slightly changing an old query—"Upon what swing doth this, our Nelson back, that he has become so great?"

In pursuit of this information we called upon Al Ciuci, pro at the Fresh Meadow Country Club, and one of the best instructors and smartest observers of them all. He knows most of the answers. Here is Al's angle on Nelson—

"In my opinion the success of Byron Nelson is due to his sound golf swing. Just what does this mean? It means for a starter that he has firm, uncocked hands and wrists at the top of his backswing. This gives him a closed face. He has a solid strong right leg bearing his weight, and what is more important—a restricted pivot on his backswing.

"His head is at all times back of the ball, which accounts for his body being back of the sphere until the hit and his hands move on to complete a smooth follow through. With this type of swing he can rarely push the ball off line. If any error occurs, he will hook.

Like Douglas Edgar

"Nelson's backswing reminds me of Douglas Edgar, whom you remember well. In my opinion Edgar was the finest iron player of all time. He was a great instructor as well as a fine player and he started a system of club swinging that came along to Nelson many years later on.

"Don't forget also that Nelson is a determined competitor who is usually able to concentrate fully all the way through a tournament. This is just as important as a correct swing."

Blake Howard, The Second

By CLARA BRAUTOVICK
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

KAY hurried along through the misty shipyard, trying to catch up with the launching party ahead that was being guided to the Liberty ship S. S. Blake Howard. She was late because she'd been caught in the melee of tin-helmeted men and kerchiefed women coming off the graveyard shift. Approval lighted the tired eyes of the younger men as they passed her.

Carlene, Blake's sister, must have suggested her name, for the invitation from the shipyard read, "Guest of the sponsor." Carlene never resented her as the older Howards had.

It might embarrass the family to have her here. It wouldn't hurt her—for suffering had drained her dry of emotion. She had lived in a vacuum ever since word had come that Blake had lost his life in covering the Pacific war as a foreign correspondent. She didn't even care now who won. There could never be any sort of victory for her.

Ahead, a long sleek car halted. Mr. and Mrs. Howard and Carlene stepped out and led the way. Kay stayed in the rear. As she rounded a corner she saw the shining new stern of a Liberty ship, and on its side the name Blake Howard. She lost some of her numbness and was afraid she would cry. "Not now!" she told herself severely.

Winding steps mounted to a platform built to the keel. The faces of the workmen were expectant and proud. From beneath the great hull came the sound of blocks being removed. The Howard's ascended to a smaller, higher platform. The women carried large sprays of red roses. Blake had always brought just such roses to Kay. . . .

Cameras clicked. Of course newspapermen would be at the launching of a ship honoring a reporter who'd been killed covering the biggest story of all!

A shipyard representative showed Carlene how to hold and swing the red, white and blue encased bottle of champagne. Then, trotting to the microphone, he boasted that this ship had been built in twenty-six days and that well over three hundred and fifty had gone down the ways since the war began.

Then a noted editor spoke of Blake Howard, the man. It was hard to hear everything above the roar. But Kay did get the references to "the curly-headed kid with the shining eyes." He told of the great stories Blake had written. But nothing of the woman he'd loved—the most important part of a man's life!

The first speaker explained that the steel plates were all that now held back the ship. He said he'd count as torches burned through them. "Burn number one!" he cried dramatically.

Till now Kay had kept out of sight of the Howards. Interested, she stepped forward. Her name was called and she glanced up. Mrs. Howard, holding out a thin hand, said, "Come quickly!"

Someone prodded Kay from behind. She found herself mounting the steps as the second order came, "Number two!"

Carlene, poised the bottle, yelled, "Take this, Kay. You're the one who should launch this ship!"

"No!" Mrs. Howard grabbed her hand and pulled her to Carlene's side. "Both of you hold on!" she ordered. Kay's old awe of Mrs. Howard made her obey.

"Number three!"

The ship began to tremble and lurch forward. As it started to move away Kay swung the bottle. It crashed against the hull and the champagne foamed in a weird design. The second Blake Howard slipped away from her to go into active service. Only this time Kay was glad! Looking at the bottle that she still clutched tensely, she was suddenly aware that it had broken in a perfect deep "V."

Kay thought, I've launched a ship—Blake's ship! For Carlene had taken her fingers off. Suddenly Kay felt alive. Her eyes met the friendly ones of the Howards. "They don't resent me any longer!" she told herself, and watched the ship float away.

Someone said, "Now she goes to the fitting-out dock and in two weeks she'll be ready for service."

Ready for service! Blake had been ready. Was Kay?

Men and women had fallen into their places and were already working. They were building another Liberty ship, started even before the S. S. Blake Howard hit water!

The necessity for speed, the thought that every second counted because the enemy also had that second in which to work, struck Kay all at once.

As the shipyard representative thanked her and presented her with a gift, Mrs. Howard asked Kay to go home with her.

"Thanks, but—" "We objected to Blake's marriage but now we want to thank you for having made Blake happy."

Kay kissed the leathery cheek. "I'll come soon, but not now. I've something to do." She motioned toward the overalled women, riveting. "I'm ashamed of all the days I've wasted. I'm going to the employment office to ask the name of a school where I can learn to do my part."

New Yorkers and others planning to visit Miami Beach this winter "will be sleeping in churches and schools," according to the president of the Greater Miami Hotel Ass'n.

Several of the accounts in the papers about the "Under Cover" author being ejected from Gerald L. K. The name was suggested when they learned you uncovered many a raw deal in the U. S. A.

"Practically all the dailies there have been gagged and strait-jacketed by the gov't, so that underground papers have sprung up everywhere. 'Winchel' gives out with the inside stuff in back of every move made by the Fascist chiefs at the Casa Rosada (Argentina's pink White House). He prints documents suppressed by officialdom, tells the facts deleted by censors and exposes the oo-la-la secrets of Juan Peron, Mussolini imitator, and No. 1 man in Argentina. The big-shots are going loco trying to learn where this new 'Winchel' gets his stuff. Caught reading him means the concentration camp at Patagonia. This is your monument in Argentina."

Our best unreliable source from Berlin just airtailed the following flash. It seems that Adolf and Goering had a tiff, again.

Adolf spotted a new medal on Hermann's uniform and said: "How many times, Hermann, I told you dot you must not vare more metties dan me? Vy you varing von extra mettle, hah?"

"Oh, mein Fuehrer," whined Goering, "diss is not a new mettle — diss iss my America First button!"

Add tough breaks: Dean Hudson, band leader, lost out on a sponsored auto program. Because his name was the same as another car . . . Dinah Shore is the victim of a wild rumor which has made her miserable, despite the acclaim of overseas troops she entertains. She is happy with her marriage . . . Former AP correspondent Mark Barron who was stricken in Ethiopia and couldn't recover over there—is fully mended since he was inducted. He is now a commando!

There will be no fanfare about it, but the British military is about to hold its first court-martial in the U. S. . . . A British officer is the defendant. The case will be heard in New York and, for security reasons, in camera. . . . But the verdict, when approved by the British War Office, will be made public in London.

Varga gets $1,000 each for his covers from King Features . . . The next Sec'y of State for Cuba will be William Belt, whose family is from Beltsville, Md., near Washington. He recently fought a duel in Havana. His opponent was a newspaper publisher. Belt missed. The publisher refused to fire.

Judging from the way some gazettes pass over the crimes of the Axis, the only way for Russia to get treated well in the press over here is to declare war on us.

Oh-you-Kid Dep't: There was some comment on Cong. Clare Luce, with one of the lads hymning her for at least getting a little chic into congress.

"Sure," conceded an acidy gal, "Clare wears the most stylish shoes a candidate's feet ever trembled in."

Soldier of the Soil

VICTORY begins with the American farmer, working from long before sunset until long after nightfall. Upon him falls the burden of feeding the fighting forces . . . the civilian population . . . and hungry mouths in war-torn countries.

To the challenge of producing more food than ever, American soldiers of the soil have responded with heroic effort. Despite shortages of help and equipment, they have established records. They have contributed mightily towards winning the war.

Now you are asked to help your fellowmen in another way . . . to contribute money to give men in the armed forces needed recreation, to give books and sports equipment to prisoners of war, to give nerve-shattered men in the merchant marine a chance to recuperate. To give unfortunate people abroad and at home a chance to have life, liberty, and happiness.

The dollars you can give are needed more than ever this year. Please give generously.

Farsighted Boss Didn't Wish to Set Precedent

The old millowner had very strong objections to granting concessions to his workpeople. One day one of the oldest hands approached him. "If you please, sir, I would like to have next Friday off," he said. "You want next-Friday off, eh? What in the world for?" "Well, you see, it's like this. It's my silver wedding, and me and the missus is going to have a bit of celebrating to do, and we thought—" "Oh, you did," broke in the employer. "And tell me one thing: is this going to happen every 25 years?"

GAS tronomy

BRAISING BEST FOR UTILITY BEEF

You can have your steak and eat it, too, if you braise the meat. Recent record production of beef has placed large quantities of unutilized "utility" or lean beef on the market. When cooked with slow, moist heat, it can be fork-tender and delicious.

To braise means to dredge meat in flour, salt and pepper, brown in fat and then cook at a low heat, with moisture, until it is thoroughly browned and tender. With a propane or butane gas range, braising is easy because the flame can be set at high to brown the meat quickly and then lowered quickly and easily so the meat will cook slowly. These fuels, known as "bottled" or "tank" gas, are used in off-the-gas-main residences.

The best cuts of meat to use for braising include beef round, chuck, ribs or plate. The meat is a deep cherry red in color with no fat marbling through it but a thin layer of fat on the outside.

For Swiss steak at its best, dredge one of the above cuts with 1/4 cup flour mixed with 2 teaspoons salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper. If possible, pound in the flour mixture with a mallet. Brown it quickly in 1/4 table-spoons fat, and then add 2 cups of canned or cooked tomatoes. Cover tightly in kettle or skillet and cook with a very low heat 2 1/2 to 3 hours until meat is tender and easily pierced with a fork.

Morning worship 11:00 a.m.
This week, we discuss faith, the last of the "earnmarks of a Christian". We take a special case of faith—faith in the face of overwhelming odds, faith such as is needed in these days of war and planning. Remember the cry of Paul "I believe, Help Thou my unbelief!" This might well be the cry of our day, as faith falters amid the anxieties and bewilderment of our age. What help does our religion bring to this question?

Sunday Evening Club 8:00 p.m.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Probation After Death" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 22.

The Golden Text was, "The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live" (John 5: 25).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses. . . . Charge them that are rich in this world that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; . . . Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life" (1 Tim. 6: 12, 17, 19).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "If the Principle, rule, and demonstration of man's being are not in the least understood before what is termed death overtakes mortals, they will rise no higher spiritually in the scale of existence on account of that single experience, but will remain as material as before the transition, still seeking happiness through a material, instead of through a spiritual sense of life, and from selfish and inferior motives. . . . Perfection is gained only by perfection" (p. 290).

The following letter was received this week from Lt. Dean Rueckert Foster Field, Texas:

Oct. 19, 1944

Dear Folks:
I find I have never written to you and to thank you for all you are doing for us in service. I receive a lot of pleasure reading our home town paper. Seems to keep us much closer to home, and with my buddies spread over many countries.

At the present time I'm sweating out a telephone call to my folks. A big disappointment to everyone. First of all I was expecting a delay in route to a new station. I didn't receive my delay as they have changed everything around. They have made me an instructor on this field. How long I do not know and how long before I'll receive a leave is beyond me.

Hope everyone is fine and things are going your way.

Regards,
Dean

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

Primary Room

The first few weeks in the life of a first grade are spent in getting acquainted and in learning how to work and play with his companions. Each of the beginners has several great achievements to his credit: He can write his name in manuscript without any aid; he can read and write numbers thru ten; and he is fast learning to recognize each letter of the alphabet and being developed day by day.

As the Second Grade program in their review they are discovering how much can be forgotten over the 3 months vacation.

We enjoyed a field trip several days ago. We were "on the look out" for beautiful autumn leaves. In about an hour we returned to the school house laden with leaves of every hue. Each child selected his loveliest leaves and dipped them. They now adorn an orange and black tack strip in our room.

—Cathryn J. Kroesch

Third and Fourth Grades

The third and fourth grade room has an enrollment of 36 pupils. There are 12 pupils in grade 3 and 24 pupils in grade 4.

We wish to welcome the following new boys and girls to our room this year: Eleanor Larimore, grade 4, attended the Trinity Lutheran school of Tinley Park; Carol Steele, grade 4, came from the Horace Mann School in Chicago; David Carlson, grade 4, was transferred from Mount Greenwood in Chicago; and Billy Schultz, grade 3, attended the Mount Vernon school in Chicago. We hope they will enjoy our room.

The 3rd and 4th grade room has several interesting pets on display. Perhaps the most interesting are the 13 tiny frogs brought to school by Ronnie Bruggeman and Dickie Gillette. Boys and girls enjoy watching these tiny creatures frolic about.

We also have a gold fish; and a turtle "Spratt", was brought to school by Lloyd Spiess.

Especially interesting to the class are the caterpillars brought by Lloyd Spiess and Bruce Searth. Two of the caterpillars made cocoons last week.

The children were fascinated by a chrysalis brought by Eleanor Larimore. The chrysalis contains a pupa which originally was a caterpillar. The pupa changes to a butterfly.

David Carlson and Jack and Gene Newton brought cocoons to add to the display.

Friday afternoon Oct. 27 from 2:30 to 3:00, the 3rd and 4th grade room will give an assembly program. Parents and friends are welcome to attend.

The pupils of grades 5 and 6 are very happy in their new room. Richard Kirk is the only new student and we are glad to know that he already likes his new school.

One of our aims this year is: "Good Posture."

The Reading Circle Books given by the school board are in great demand among the pupils, as all are anxious to read the new books.

Room 3, grades 5 and 6, was very proud when it was the winner of the $1.00 award given by the PTA during the September meeting. This was given to the room having the most parents present. The book, "Krank's" was purchased and added to the library.

Our new English dictionary and science books are such a pleasure to work with, that everyone is enjoying them and really getting something from them. These books make work fun.

In science, many experiments have been performed. Some in the room, others were done at home and then the results brought to school to show to the class.

We wish to thank those who have sent the beautiful bouquets of flowers to help make our room more attractive. We did appreciate the kindness.

The Junior High School has an enrollment of 21 pupils in the 8th grade and 15 pupils in 7th grade, making a total of 36 pupils.

We are glad to welcome Donald Stauffer, Mary Ann and Wesley Larimore, and Roy Carlson to our room.

There have been some changes made in our text books. Especially well liked are our new English books and the book called, "Adventures in Dictionary Land."

We have enjoyed visits from former students and service men home on furlough.

Russell Bennett who has covered considerable territory at sea and taken part in several invasions, told us some interesting things about the places he has been.

Other servicemen who called were Robert Benson, Fremont Warming, Lt. Vernon Sizer and E. H. Gillette, F-1-c.

Mr. Herbert Lavon of Geneseo, Ill., stopped and visited with his cousin Mr. Ray Westlund and wife, last Friday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. John Martin spent last Sunday in Chicago with Mr. T. Berger and together they attended the World Playhouse and saw and heard "An Adventure in Music".

What Thoughtful Farmers Did

During the fall of 1943 a handful of thoughtful farmers got together and, on a Dutch Treat basis, held several luncheon and dinner meetings to try and find from some one just what could be done by the average farmer in improving his crop yields by the use of Certified Seed which they had been hearing so much about of late.

They invited Professor J. C. Hackleman and Mr. A. L. Lang, both of the University of Illinois, to be their guests one evening and tell them just what would be the benefits derived from sowing and raising nothing but Certified Seed on their farms.

From this meeting they learned so much that they decided right then and there to do something about it, they organized what is now known as the Kane County Certified Seed Growers whose mailing address is Elburn, Ill., and at the same time they adopted a slogan which in itself is worthy of note—Be Neighboring, Plant Only Certified Seeds.

This Kane County Certified Seed Growers organization is strictly a non-profit set up, no salaried employees, just 16 farmers, so far, who are working together to produce nothing for sale but Certified Seed, which must be Certified by the Illinois Crop Improvement Association which itself was organized in 1922 to render service to the farmers of Illinois.

The 1944 crop, the first planting by this group, comprising some 700 acres planted to oats, wheat, barley and soy beans was a fine crop, producing excellent seed.

Members of the Kane County Certified Seed Growers, Elburn, Ill., are as follows: A. S. Booth, Lorin K. Davis; Porter Foxall of Elburn, Ill., J. J. Brankey of Kaneville, Ill. Harry Cochran and Arthur Healey of Aurora, Dr. Carroll Johnson and Harlan Johnson of Batavia, Wm. Peplow, Hampshire, Ill., I. B. Newell Russell and Hans Schudel of Elgin, Carl Wester and A. C. Johnson of Geneva, E. H. Eichler of Dundee, and Edw. F. Cooke, Virgil, Ill.

On December 1, 1944 at Sugar Grove Community House, this group plans to hold a meeting to which all the farm folk and their friends will be invited to view pictures of actual fields of grain in various stages of growth so that everyone can see for himself just what these folks are trying to accomplish for the benefit of Kane County farmers. In addition, other picture entertainment will be given and, if possible, a light lunch will be served.

Wm. J. Tuohy Discusses Problems

Wm. J. Tuohy, the Democratic nominee for State's Attorney, has this to say on some of the serious problems which many law enforcing agencies fear may result in a post-war crime wave.

A type of crime, which it is feared may grow faster than it has today, is juvenile delinquency. The present rate of offenses committed by youth seems to show a shocking increase that is the direct cause of the shock on the home front caused by the war.

Mr. Tuohy, who has had eleven years' experience in the State's Attorney's office as one of Thomas J. Courtney's principal assistants, is campaigning vigorously for the office and declares that his first aim as prosecutor will be to keep on top of the crime problem at all times.

Concerning juvenile delinquency, Mr. Tuohy said, "Juvenile delinquency is a problem which even in its mildest form requires constant study and attention. Its prevention and reduction is vital to the well being of not only the oncoming generation but the present one. Juvenile delinquency is in itself the seed from which adult crime springs and the more successfully it is stamped out the quicker will crimes against the state be minimized.

"But it is my firm opinion that the home is the first place in which to bring about the elimination of juvenile delinquency. I have found that in a great majority of cases of juvenile delinquency, there is also adult delinquency. Because of that, I am not so quick to blame youth as I am the parents of those who are brought before the courts for juvenile offenses.

Here's how to get more light for your home

lamp bulbs,
reflectors

Lighting equipment gives as much as 50% more light when bulbs, bowls and shades are clean. Dust or grime blocks the flow of light.

Always disconnect lamps from outlets before cleaning. Wash glass or plastic bulbs, bowls and reflectors with luke-warm, soapy cloth. Rinse bowls or reflectors to remove soap, but do not dip bulbs under water. Wipe suds off bulbs with damp cloth. Dry bulbs, bowls and reflectors thoroughly before attaching them to fixture.

You'll get more light for your money if you follow these simple suggestions.

NEW LENOX

Dolores Anderson

Sept. 14, 1944

Dear Service Club:

Received your wonderful box of candy which was meant for my birthday last June. I'd sure like to enjoy eating a piece at this time, but I was lucky enough to have three pieces out of it. Even though it was a couple of months old, it vanished in a mere second. You see the reason for not receiving it sooner was, that the 3rd and 4th class mail such as packages and papers has been held up from us and they were the first that we had received since March. I sure have plenty of reading material now. Between the Mokena News Bulletin that you send me and the Joliet Herald that I receive from my folks I sure have enough to read.

Well it's been a long time since I was in the states, in fact I have 4 months to go until I have 18 months out here and I sure hope I get back after that time. The last liberty I had was back in January and I'm sure ready for one. Since I've been out here I've only seen one fellow from home and that was Forrest Slick who is aboard the Tennessee. I went over to his ship a few months ago, and looked him up. When I found him he was at work with some ammunition, so I stood by and waited for him to look up. At first he just stood and stared then he let out a war-whoop and we really had a good time together that afternoon. He showed me around the battleship, took me to their ship service where they can get ice cream and cake, and that was the last time I had any of that sort of refreshment. But, it may be nice on a battle wagon but I'll take the destroyer Navy any day. Aboard a destroyer you know everyone and you live as one big family. Well folks at home, there isn't much more I can say, but thanks a lot for the birthday present and I hope to see you soon. Will close for this time, I remain,

Yours truly,

Bob.

School Improvements

Recommendations intended to bring about substantial improvements in the organization and operation of the public schools serving the people living in the rural areas of Illinois are contained in a final report just completed by the schools committee of the Illinois Agricultural Association. The report will be presented at the schools conference to be held Nov. 30 in connection with the IAA annual meeting in the Hotel Sherman, Chicago.

The report is the result of work carried on by the IAA school committee which began its study in August, 1943. The committee is made up of two persons selected by the leaders of the Farm Bureau in each of the 15 downstate congressional districts, and three members from the IAA board of directors. One Farm adviser served in an advisory capacity.

During the year of study, the IAA schools committee has consulted with outstanding educational leaders of the state and nation and with persons representing all divisions of the rural educational field.

The IAA schools committee has also been assisted by county school committees formed during the past year which carried on surveys in local areas and made recommendations to the state committee on the basis of these surveys.

In its study, the IAA schools committee recognized that no one pattern of school organization would fit all communities. Conditions vary from county to county, and from community to community. Careful study and consideration, however, disclosed that certain fundamental principles apply in every community. The committee's report attempts to outline the major principles which apply to all communities, and to describe some adaptation of these principles to conditions found in individual communities.

Part of Buford herd grazing on experimental pasture.

STOCKTON, ILL.—An emergency pasture of Sudan grass and Soybeans, planted on the Buford Bros. farm near here, brought a 16% increase in milk production in the first week the dairy herd was turned into the pasture, and resulted in a gain of $50.00 in increased income and savings on grain.

Volume of milk from the 22 Holsteins in the Buford herd increased 800 pounds over the previous week when the herd was on bluegrass, with the supplementary grain ration reduced nearly one-half.

The demonstration was set up at the suggestion of the Extension Service, University of Illinois, and was under the supervision of Homer Kearns, Farm Adviser. The Stockton plant of the Kraft Cheese Company cooperated by providing the seed.

Approximately eight acres were seeded to the Sudan-soybean mixture, slightly below standard recommendations of one-half acre per cow. Seeding was at the rate of 25 pounds of Sudan and 1½ bu. of soybeans per acre.

In the week before the cows went on the emergency pasture, the herd produced 5,124 pounds of milk. During the first week on Sudan pasture, production was 5,917 pounds of milk, and 187.3 pounds of fat.

John Buford reported that on the first two days, the herd foraged only a few feet from the gate, cropping heavily. Later, they wandered more and spent more time resting in the shade. After five days, the herd was put on bluegrass pasture at night, and milk production dropped 84 pounds the next day.

After ten days of pasturing on the Sudan-soy, the herd was moved to a second-growth alfalfa field, with supplementary hay and grain feeding. Production held well with the previous week. In five days, average daily production was 823 pounds, while in a comparable period, the average for five days on the Sudan grass was 658 pounds.

Production averaged 732 pounds per day on the bluegrass pasture in the seven days prior to use of the Sudan, with an average of 845 pounds in the first seven days on the emergency pasture. A low of 641 pounds was recorded on bluegrass with a high of 899 pounds after four days on Sudan. The Sudan low was 811 pounds on day and night pasturing.

Farm Adviser Kearns is recommending to all dairymen that they grow emergency pastures such as fall seeded rye for early spring pasture, to be followed with the Sudan-soybean combination next June, so as to increase milk yields, reduce the cost of the grain, hay, and silage feeding, and to keep the herd in better health.

"Due to the fact that there is an extreme shortage of farm labor throughout the county, the above program will assist our dairymen because less time is required for feeding and care when good emergency pastures are used," he said.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"We can't argue with the Judge on that point, can we Mabel? It's not fair to penalize the many for the actions of the few."

"That, folks, is exactly what we would be doing in this country if we ever voted for prohibition again. Authorities who have made a careful study of the problem, report that only about 5% of those who drink abuse the privilege occasionally...95% drink sensibly. Probably doesn't compare with the number of folks who overeat and do other things to excess. Prohibition certainly isn't the answer. It's not that simple. We had nearly 14 years proof of that, didn't we?

"The real answer is education and better control. In fact, the responsible members of the distilling industry are working constantly toward that end. They don't want anybody to abuse the use of their product any more than the three of us do."

"If everybody would take that sensible attitude, Judge, and cooperate as more and more are now doing, we'd be a lot better off a lot quicker."

Dick Lambrecht received the following letter from his cousin, Pvt. Grant Geuther who is serving with the medical detachment in France:

Finally, I am sending you that small gift I promised to send. Enclosed you will find 12 francs, or 24 cents in American money. The ten, five and two franc notes are the same size, but the fifty, hundred and five hundred are the size of the American dollar. The Yanks are not allowed to have American money over here, so we use French money in our financial transactions. A few of the French schools have opened recently and it's quite a sight to see kids going to school. Some wear wooden shoes, some wear G.I. shoes some boys wear dresses and some a mixture of American uniforms. All in all, it's quite a fashion parade a la war-torn France. Buddy, you can't realize how lucky you American kids are. Some of these little "frogs" never saw an orange, or candy, until the Yanks arrived. Never forget that your a Yank and beat the devil out of anyone that says we're not the best there is. Enough preaching. Say hello to all."

Gerald Eisenbrandt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eisenbrandt, was two years old Friday, October 20. ## So Help Me God

Mr. Ray L. Dudley, publisher of the Oil Weekly, Houston, Texas, has lost two of his three sons in this war. Below is what he wrote in the October 5th, 1944 issue.

"SO HELP ME GOD"

By Ray L. Dudley

I stood in the blazin sun at Ellington Field, in Texas, last Monday and watched the cadets file by, fine manly chaps, watched them come into the hall in which they were to receive their wings as commissioned officers in the United States Army Air Force. My third and last boy, a lad of 19, was among them.

Two years ago his mother and I had seen a similar group file into the chapel at Ellington to receive their wings, and our second boy was among them. Today he and his elder brother, who had chosen Navy Air, are memories, precious memories of in hushed tones as boys who and mother. They, with thousands of others, have made the supreme sacrifice for America as they knew it and loved it.

Then Monday we heard again the prospective officers take the oath necessary to their commissions:

"I do solemnly swear that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign or domestic, that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office upon which I am about to enter: SO HELP ME GOD."

For a moment my thoughts drifted from the son whose burned body lies somewhere in France and from the other son who lies in native soil.

Our forefathers who wrote the Constitution knew that they were giving to future generations a document so precious that it would be worth the loss of American lives to preserve. . . and they knew that there would arise enemies to it domestic as well as foreign.

Then my mind went back to a time nearly three years ago, when my first two boys volunteered, and the pledge I made them then:

"To the best of my meager ability I shall do all I can to defend against foes at home the institutions you boys have enlisted to uphold. . . and I shall do that without fear of sacrifice if it costs me everything I have, including my life, so help me God."

It was not necessary that I pledge them my fullest efforts to help prosecute the war. . . they could have expected no less of me as an American and a father.

The casualty lists over the country name thousands of parents whose boys have been lost and whose sons are as precious to them as mine were to me. I claim no distinction as the parent of boys who have died in the service. I can only claim to be among those whom this war is a deadly serious thing, and I wish my claim to be listed among those who resent with every atom of their being, the efforts which are being made by the Hillmans, the Browners, the Murrys and others, including our President, to nullify the sacrifices of thousands of American boys.

As I heard the oath to defend the Constitution repeated by the young men at Ellington, I could not but remember the remarks which have been made about it by Americans of foreign birth who would seek to destroy it. . . "a scrap of paper. . . an outmoded document. . . a bill of property rights rather than a bill of human rights." And these are the men who are asking that we trust our country to them.

The situation under which the Communist Front in America is trying to wield control over our country through the capture of one of our great political parties, is so preposterous as to be almost incredible. But make no mistake—the threat is a real one. That a Russian-born radical, with all of the class hate of his native land should aspire to control this country is so fantastic that many cannot believe it. But it is true.

That he and his fellows have openly boasted that their organization, the CIO, is raising millions as a war chest to help keep Roosevelt in power, indicates a blatant confidence in their victory. That this money should be extracted from hundreds of thousands of members whose membership was forced on them, is a disgrace. That they get away with it is a shameful tribute to the close association they have with our Department of Justice.

Who was it who climbed the stairs, hat in hand, to Truman's suite in a Chicago hotel to learn the wishes of the boss as to who would be Democratic candidate for the vice presidency? It was our United States Department of Justice head—the man sworn to uphold our laws—including the Smith-Connally act which makes it a felony for a labor party, or a corporation, to contribute to a political party. Yes, it was Attorney General Biddle, and the man with him was the person who later was named by Truman as the Democratic vice presidential nominee, Harry Truman.

Will Hillman and Browder and their like as arrogant, as they are now, what will their attitude be if they succeed in re-electing Franklin D. Roosevelt? Where will their power end? What will happen to the rights guaranteed under our Constitution? If our interests should ultimately clash with those of Russia at what point will these men make up their minds as to where their first loyalty shall lie? If England's interests should clash with those of Russia, will our country's armed forces be thrown against a nation whose kinship to us derives from a common parenthood?

This is a long way from the ceremony at Ellington last Monday. The field has widened until the lives of a large group of fine boys seem but a drop in a great ocean. But it is not a long way from the pledge I made my boys.

ORLAND PARK

by Mrs. S. S. Knox

Mrs. Herbert Lucas received word from her husband Herbert Lucas M M 3-c stationed in Hilo, Hawaii that he was entertaining Sgt. Eldon Nicolai last Sunday. The boys are stationed about three miles apart, so when they have time off, can get together quite often. It is quite a treat to meet someone from your home town when you are so far away from home.

Pvt. Gust Zerbs is home on a furlough.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cox celebrated their 26th wedding anniversary last Sunday, October 22. They were greatly surprised when their son Pte. Bud Cox and his buddy Pte. Dick Yewiski of Detroit came home to enjoy a furlough. Mr. and Mrs. E. Wright of Lemont, parents of Mrs. Cox and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Butcher also of Lemont, sister and brother in law of Mrs. Cox also paid a surprise visit. They presented Mr. and Mrs. Cox with a purse of 25 silver dollars in honor of their silver anniversary.

Bud was stationed at Ft. Buss, Texas, and will report to Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. at the end of his furlough. Mrs. Gustie Hallman entertained her sister in law, Mrs. Charlotte Woodbury of Chicago last Sunday.

Cpl. Harry Hallman and family were dinner guests at the Russell Hughes home last Sunday.

Mrs. Jefferson Ludwig underwent an operation Saturday morning, Oct. 21 at Silver Cross hospital.

The Old Time Republican Rally held in the Sherman Hotel Thursday night, October 19 was well attended. Orland was represented by the following: Mr. and Mrs. Ike Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Zerbs Mr. and Mrs. Harry Heiting, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yunker, Mr. Elmer Newton; Geo. Mrs. Elsie Yunker chairman of the lunch counter for the Auxiliary, at the Auction sale held Saturday on the Ray Sullivan premises, reports a good profit on the sale. The proceeds will be used for Christmas packages for the Orland boys in service.

Well the "Galloping Breakfast" sponsored by the Womans Club occurred Monday morning, October 23rd. There were 20 ladies who dared come out as they were when called on to this breakfast at the home of the President, Mrs. Harry Pihl. The hostess was unaware that the breakfast was to take place at her home until one member on the committee drove up to her home with part of the breakfast menu. The only inkling she may have had was when the member was called to make sure she would be home. This was one chance the ladies could see themselves as others do, as some were in the midst of house cleaning, washing some their regular daily housework and some just out of bed and one still in bed you can just imagine the laughs and fun when all the ladies arrived at the breakfast home. One member was so excited that she backed her car into a culvert. To the ladies who did not or could not come you missed a good time and delicious breakfast. The Happy Birthday song was sung at the breakfast table for Mrs. Laura Cooper whose birthday was that day. The proceeds of the breakfast will be used for the Christmas packages for the boys in service.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Town and family were dinner guests last Sunday at the Lawrence Uthe home in Blue Island.

The teacher and pupils have organized a scrap paper drive and all are asked to have whatever paper they may have available ready for the pickup. Either the children, or members of the PTA, who are co-operating in this drive, will call for the paper. It is suggested that it put in bundles of approximately 25 lbs.

GAS tronomy GLAMORIZE YOUR VEGETABLES

Shelves overloaded with home-canned vegetables offer excellent opportunities for serving many versatile dishes. Try different combinations to make them a real asset to the meal.

The range, whether burners or oven are used, is most important in the preparation of the vegetables. Those who live beyond the city gas mains and have their range serviced with propane or butane—the "bottled" or "tank" gases—will find the cooking of vegetables simplified. Easily regulated low flames are excellent when you don't want to over-cook the vegetables. The moist heat of gas ranges will brown and cook vegetables evenly.

Mix a can of your corn, with eggs and milk, and bake in a buttered casserole, topped with buttered crumbs. Try your peas heated with bits of crumbled bacon or pearl onions. Green beans can be scalloped, that is, layered with white sauce and topped with buttered crumbs or cheese.

Home-canned beets take on glamour when orange juice and rind or orange sauce is added. Carrots are delicious when baked with a tablespoon or two of honey and sprinkled with chopped parsley.

"Soldiers of Safety" Winning Accident War

School safety patrols, sponsored and equipped by the Chicago Motor Club, guard more than a million children in Illinois and Indiana. As a result of patrol activities and safety education taught in schools, child fatalities have steadily decreased until the school age group has the lowest traffic fatality record of any age group. More than 5000 lives have been saved since the patrol was organized.

STATE SOCIALISM FOR UNITED STATES?
CANADA IS VERY DEFINITELY HEADED for state socialism, which is but a slightly modified form of communism. As a means of capturing the farm vote the Canadian communism will not, for the present, include a socialization of the small, one family, farms. It will include government ownership and operation of all transportation and other utilities, all industrial manufacturing and a strict regulation of merchandising.

Sometime between now and next March 25, Mackenzie King, the Canadian prime minister, must call for an election of members of the Canadian parliament. That new parliament will select a prime minister and fix the policies of the government. There seems hardly a chance of preventing the socialists from securing a majority in that new parliament. They are led by M. J. Caldwell, a theoretical school teacher and labor agitator, who has captured the imagination of the workers and small farmers of the Dominion, and he has carried the recent elections in contests for seats in provincial parliaments.

Are we headed in the same direction as Canada? It looks as though we may be. We have not, as yet, given a definite name to the "ism" for which we are seemingly heading. Some call it "New Dealism," though the President has asked us to forget that name.

That we have a start on the road to some form of state socialism is evident from a few facts: The federal government today owns more than one fifth of the industrial capacity of the nation, with an investment of considerably more than 20 billions of dollars; the government owns nearly one fourth of all the arable land in the nation; the government owns an interest in, and has a voice in the management of, a large number of banks; the government is operating well over 60 business corporations, financed with government money and competing with private business; through OPA, WPB and WLB the government controls industry, merchandising and labor.

Under such conditions it is but a step from what is left of the American free enterprise system to that form of communism Canada calls state socialism.

POLITICIANS MUST WORK TO BE SUCCESSFUL

MORE POLITICIANS, both men and women, are willing to aid the cause of their party by talk than by work. They will make speeches but they will not ring doorbells, though ringing doorbells produces more votes than speeches when election day comes around.

Jim Farley was rated as a successful politician, but his success was due more to work than to talk. I was sitting in his private office one day, during the '36 campaign, when the receptionist announced a caller. Jim instructed her to have the visitor wait for two or three minutes, and suggested that I remain. He called for the card on that man. It was one of half a million, but so filed it took only a moment to locate it. The last entry on that card noted the recent birth of a son. After glancing at the card Jim told the receptionist to send the visitor in, and met him with extended hand at the door.

"The man I wanted most to see," said Jim to his visitor, "but first tell me about that boy."

No number of speeches could have changed that man's vote. He was for any one Jim Farley proposed as a candidate. The half a million of those personal cards meant work in compiling and keeping them up to date, but it was work that paid dividends in votes.

AMERICA ITSELF ON ELECTION DAY

WHEN WE VOTE do we perform that duty of citizenship as members of a labor union, a farm organization, a corporation director or stockholder, a Methodist or Baptist or Catholic or Lutheran? Do we vote as a Jew or gentile, a German, or Italian, or Russian, or English or French? Do we vote as anything other than as an American? Unless our Americanism comes first, unless we are willing to vote for the best interests, as each of us see those interests, of a majority of all of us, we can say farewell to our Republic. That America is the first interest of its citizens is the foundation on which the Republic is built. Minority rule has no place in a Republic.

SHOULD THE RECONVERSION and demobilization plans not work out as it is hoped they may, should there be a delay in converting to peace-time production, resulting in unemployment and bread lines, there is one element in our population that will not be found in the lines of the hungry. That is the farmers. They will have food for themselves and their families; they will have shelter, and the wood lot will provide heat. That is what the farm way of life insures, and it is a valuable insurance.

Truce Clears Battleground of Civilians

When Dunkirk became the center of operations, Allies and Germans agreed to a truce in order that civilians could leave the city. Views showing them leaving are typical of other cities along the route of the advancing Yanks. Allied headquarters say that the Dunkirk truce plan may not be followed in all other cities. Individual commanders will decide in the future.

Holland in Ruins as War Rages Toward Berlin

Typical of most Holland cities, Nejmegen, hit by German and Allied bombardment and shelling, shows the effect of the war upon that country. American soldiers aid in cleaning up the city as well as take care of snipers left behind by the retreating Nazis. Cooperation of organized Holland underground has made it possible for Allied troops to advance rapidly. Nothing remains standing in wake of Nazi retreat.

Coastguardsmen Cast Ballots

Coastguardsmen at a replacement pool in the South Pacific exercise their right to vote along with millions of American servicemen all over the world. These men are awaiting new assignments to coast guard fighting ships in the Pacific and will win back the Philippines and carry fighting troops in Japan. Early reports indicate considerable interest on the part of overseas veterans, with considerable soldier, sailor and marine individual campaigners at work.

No Place Like Our Old Home

Even when it is in ruins like this one at Scarperia, near the Gothic line in Italy, there is no place like home. Using a shell hole in the wall for a door, the couple return and lay plans on building a new home without fear of further oppression from the Nazi yolk as was their lot in the past.

THE CHRISTIAN MOTIVE FOR LIVING International Temperance Sunday

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 4:5-8; Luke 4:4; John 6:35; Romans 12:1, 2; 13:12-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Seek those things which are above.—Colossians 3:1.

Disciplined living should be the goal of each of us. Life is not to be lived carelessly, influenced by chance events or passing impulses. Such discipline of life would keep men from the temptations which lead them into intemperance and sin.

A life can be properly disciplined, only as it is controlled by Christian motives. Such a life has—

I. Spiritual Gladness (Ps. 4:5-8).
The psalmist had faced the distressing questioning of men who derided him for his faith. They were unbelievers who demanded of him what good his religion did (v. 6). He has an answer, and it is the testimony of his own experience.

Those around him sought gladness in the harvest of grain and in the wine which was supposed to give a lift to their spirits. This was their joy. Well, the man of God had something infinitely superior. He had gladness in his heart. It was not dependent on outward circumstances—it was within.

Then note, too, that it did not rest on something that happened, or on some fellow man. "Thou (God) hast put gladness in my heart." That means real joy and satisfaction.

II. Spiritual Food (Luke 4:4; John 6:35).

It is delightful to have true gladness, but man needs food if he is to grow and to work. That is true spiritually, for he must have the needed nourishment of life here also.

Jesus when tempted (Luke 4:4) because He was hungry saw beyond the temporal need, and declared that life should be controlled by a higher principle. The spiritual has a place of supremacy over the physical in the life of the Christian man or woman. The body with its desires is to be subject to the definite control of the spirit, which takes its orders from God.

The explanation of the awful alcoholic debauchery of our day is found right here. Men have given their bodies the supreme authority and they are driven by the lusts of their flesh. What they need more than legal reform or restriction of sale of liquor (and we believe in both) is the regeneration of their souls by the grace of God in Christ Jesus. Let us bring them the gospel.

John 6:35 makes known the fact that Jesus, the bread of life, satisfies every need of men. Every normal hunger and thirst finds full satisfaction in Him. Have you tried Him as the One to meet the need of your hungry heart?

III. Spiritual Service (Rom. 12:1, 2).

"Reasonable service," says the Authorized Version; "spiritual service," says the Revised Version. Both are right. The man who is really reasonable will be spiritual and will render to God a sacrificial service.

Note that it is a "living sacrifice" that is said to be "holy, acceptable to God." This is not a case of a single act of deep devotion (great as that may be), but a going on in the daily walk to live for Christ. That calls for grace and power, and He is ready and willing to give both to each of His children.

That experience with God means a non-conformity to the world, which is too little spoken of and less practiced in the church today. The one who professes to follow Christ is simply not to be conformed to the ways of this wicked world. There is to be a completely transforming experience of the grace of God, that takes you out of this world while you are still in it.

IV. Spiritual Walk (Rom. 13:12-14).

Christians are the children of the morning. They walk in the light (I John 1:7). This world walks in darkness. No one needs any argument to prove that point—just look about you.

The deeds of darkness are evil deeds, and men dwell in darkness because they love evil (John 3:19). That means that the children of light must walk circumspectly and "becomingly" (that's a good word!) in this world. Thus we may attract others out of the darkness into the light, so that they too may put aside "reveling and drunkenness," yes, and also "strife and jealousy." Those go together.

The way to victory is to be clothed with the Lord Jesus and His righteousness (v. 14). That is a real "armor of light" with which we may be protected.

Note also that we are studiously to avoid making any provision for the desires of the flesh. Put such things away, and with them will go the temptation to use them. Some professing Christians need to heed this word by destroying some beverages which they may have on hand—just to give one example.

Bag of Sponges Used As Proposal of Marriage

If you came down for breakfast one morning and found on the table a silken net containing 21 sponges, what would you think? Probably that the unknown donor had been to the Black Market, because sponges are almost unobtainable now.

But there is an island where, if you received such a present, you would know that one of your girl friends, 21 years old, was asking you to marry her.

Most of the world's supply comes from the Mediterranean—from Tunis, Crete, Cyprus, and Lampedusa, to quote only a few places. Supplies are also obtained from the Bahamas and Florida bay.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

If you have any doubts about the shortage of new passenger car tires, a recent statement by a government agency that knows the situation should clear your mind. It points out that less than one new tire for each car on the road will be produced in 1944, even if the industry is able to achieve the goal of 22 million passenger car tires.

Tire care is imperative now, particularly with users of truck and bus casings. Stocks are low, and it is estimated that during the latter part of the year there will be a shortage of 25,000 tires a month to meet replacement requirements on vehicles using tires of the 8.25 size and over.

When Your Back Hurts - And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache; rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. THE STORY THUS FAR: Amos Croy, who had served in the Civil War as a sergeant, was one of the covered wagon pioneers from Ohio, who settled on homestead land near Marysville, Missouri. There he met and won Susan Sewell, a daughter of another settler, who lived twelve miles away. Their early years were spent in building the farm from the ground up, one-room log home, sod barn, new orchard, well and outbuildings. Roads were never considered by the original settlers, but new arrivals insisted, so community roads and a school was added to the community. Some still went to town by way of the trails. It was shorter to cut through over the farms than go by the road.

CHAPTER II

With a baby coming, a one-room home would not do, so Uncle Jim and Uncle Dexter, and probably another uncle, came in and a bedroom was attached. And there I was born and there the room still stands. It was a shock, a few years ago, when I went back and found the room was being used as a henhouse.

I find myself hesitating to mention the year, because it all seems so fearfully long ago. It wasn't. I am to be surprised to see how spry I am. It was really the year Brooklyn Bridge was built. There!

And here are some other things that came in that year: the old Waldorf-Astoria was opened, the last spike was driven in the Northern Pacific and Joseph Pulitzer bought the New York World. And this was the year Mark Twain's "Life on the Mississippi" appeared.

The new room was a good hospital, Aunt Mandy Sewell drove up and stayed a week and the event went off all right. It was not long until my mother was up and doing the washing and baking and cooking and things were back to normal.

I am sometimes asked where I got my first name, and if it was because my parents loved the blind poet. It wasn't quite that romantic. I was named for the township in Ohio where my father came from. I was not given a middle name.

A child's first memory is, I believe, usually about people. My first memory is about my mother and a wholly unimportant one. We were walking in the orchard and I picked up an apple and put it in the pocket of my dress. The apple became caught—was tight in the pocket—a tragedy to me—and my mother worked the apple out. I expect psychiatrists could explain something or other by that. But I can't.

My next memory is of a hole in the living-room floor. The floor tilted a little and my father had bored an auger hole so that when my mother scrubbed, the water would drain off. I would try to look through the hole and would wonder what was on the other side. And I always have wondered what was on the other side.

And now a confused memory, one quite a bit more involved. It was that something dreadful was happening. And indeed it was. My father came riding one of the plow horses in from the field at a gallop and leaped off, opened the gate, and let them go in the barn lot with the harness on. Then he came running to the house and we all got into the cyclone cave and sat wrapped in quilts. Now and then Pa would lift up the doors and look out. When we finally came out, the barn had been blown away and one of the horses killed. So destructive are the cyclones of this section, and so sharply defined are they, that this one had swept through the orchard my father and mother had set out, and had mowed half of it down and left the other standing. And there it was, all my early days, the half-down half-up orchard, the scarred and twisted trees. My mother used to talk about "her" orchard. When she wanted to rest she would take her chair with the leather bottom Pa had woven and go out and sit under one of the trees.

The Sewells made another run and the barn was rebuilt. I remember (another trifling flash) sitting on a joist and watching Uncle Sewell mortise a hole.

I developed a deep affection for that barn, for barns do things to you.

I do not remember my first day at Knabb School, except the disgrace I got into. But I can still see the schoolhouse. That, however, is easy for it is still much as it was then. I've often read of "the little red schoolhouse," but I never saw one. In our section, all country schoolhouses were white, and for that matter, they still are. There it was—a coal house in the yard, an iron pump, a cyclone cave, and at the back of the lot, two small structures with half-moons in the sides. Two or three horses would be tied to hitching-posts for the scholars who lived too far away, or were too small to walk. When it was time for school to take up, the teacher came to the door and rang a hand-bell and that was the end of it. The only difference in the schoolhouse between my day and now is that someone, with advanced ideas on education and eyestrain, decided that all light should come from the south, so the north windows were closed up. The children seem a bit blinky-eyed.

Horses still chomp at the hitch rack—the family car mustn't be tied up. The coal house still stands, but a new kind of stove has come in. It is full of coils and has all sorts of fancy devices, but I suspect the big boys don't get to go out so often for a scuttle of coal. And instead of having every seat taken up, there are now only half a dozen tots, tots too small to be toted off to town by the school board bus.

But back to the disgrace. The boys seemed like giants, and I was afraid of them. When recess time came, the big girls must have seen my uneasiness, for they took me to their backhouse to relieve myself. When I returned, the boys were waiting, and taunted me until I felt I was disgraced for life. I think it was the first time I realized the world is made up of two sexes and never shall they meet . . . at least in certain places.

When school dismissed of an afternoon, the scholars would come out and some would start one direction and some another. Then I would start north and pretty soon I would come to the top of a hill and there would be the Croy farm.

That was the way all farms were spoken of. The Newt Kennedy farm, the Scott farm, the Willhoite farm; they had personalities just as people have. Sometimes a family would move away, but their place was still called the Duncan farm, or the Trullinger farm. It took a long time to call a place by the name of the new people. If the man was a tenant, the situation was about hopeless.

Life was hard during the week. But what a wonderful day Sunday was! We got up the same time as usual. But there was a different tempo. Pa got up more leisurely, and started the fire in the kitchen stove.

Pa would pump a bucket of water for Ma, start the kitchen stove going, then start for the barn lot. As I lay in bed, or dressed, I could follow his progress by the sounds. First there would be the creaking of the barn door and a whiny of welcome from the horses, then a stalling, so eager were they to be fed. The sound of Pa scooping up the corn, then the shutting of the barn door; this meant he was on the way to feed the hogs. There would be a dreadful uproar as the hogs saw him coming. The nearer he got, the worse the noise; the sound of the hogs fighting among themselves. Abruptly the uproar would die away and peace and contentment would descend upon the hog lot: the hogs were feeding.

He would go to the steer yard and there would be the sound of corn cobs snapping as the steers followed him. Then the sound of corn being poured into the troughs and the soft thud of the cattle as they bumped sides crowding up to the troughs. Now and then a steer would give a grunt; that meant one steer had chugged another with his head.

With the horses and steers fed, Pa would unhook the windmill. There would be a sharp clang as the gears meshed, then a whirring as the wind laid hold of the blades. Then I could hear him coming to the house; no time for laziness now, and I would spring into my pants. Pa didn't think much of anybody who couldn't get dressed by the time the stock was fed. My mother would be up, putting corn cobs and coal into the kitchen range. By that time Pa would be at the kitchen door. No one in our house ever said good morning. But Pa would say:

"Susan, we've got a dead pig."

Mother would say, "One of the strong ones?"

"No. Old Blackie's titman."

Then a feeling of relief.

We'd take our buckets and start for the cow lot, Pa and Ma walking ahead, and me bringing up the rear.

for I hated to work. We'd get our stools down from the cracks in the fence and it wouldn't be long before there would be the sound of milk pinging. Ma's would be coming very fast, Pa's next, and coming pretty slow would be mine. After a time the milking would be over and Pa would take the two heavy buckets, and I'd take the next heaviest, and Ma the lightest, and we'd start for the house and breakfast, me a bit ahead now.

Sunday morning was bathing time and, after breakfast, Pa would bring in the washtub and put it on the kitchen floor and fill it from the reservoir. Then Pa would retire to grease the "hack," and I would read and Ma would take her bath. Pa would come in and wash his hands in the pan on the back porch, empty the tub and fill it again, and Ma would go into the other room to write to relatives, while I'd still be reading and dreading the bath call. We'd hear Pa splashing around, and afterwards he'd come with his suspenders hanging down and walking on his toes so as not to spot the floor, and call, "Homer!" I'd give a groan and carry out his water and fill the tub again, and be in and out in no time at all.

Pa would get down the big harvester calendar and study the dates with circles around them. Then he'd say, "Well, by next Sunday we ought to have a new calf."

It wouldn't be long till time to start to church, and pretty soon Pa and I would be standing beside the hack, and Ma would come out with her Bible and her response leaflets. Ma would sit in front with Pa and I'd sit in the back. They'd talk more now than any other time; once in a while Pa would turn and give me good advice.

We'd look to see if the neighbors had started to church. If they were hitching up, Pa'd wave at them, or shake his buggy whip. Some of the neighbors didn't go to church at all. Ma always dropped her voice when she spoke to them, and Pa would say, "They'll pay for it sometime."

The men sat on one side and the women on the other; the little boys sat with their mothers and the big boys sat in the back, whispering and making faces out of the knots in the seats. Now and then some of the big boys would carve their initials, but it was pretty well understood they were going to hell. Sometimes I'd feel sorry for them; then I'd think the fools deserved it.

The preacher would drone along, now and then giving the Bible a whack. Now and then a mud-dauber would follow him; but the eyes of the men or the women wouldn't; nor of the girls. Sometimes two mud-daubers would get into a fight; then the preacher would have to give two whacks. Suddenly a mule at the hitch rack would set up an excruciating, ear-breaking hee-haw, ending with the grunts and chokes and groans with which a mule always closes his song. It'd make the boys snort. No amount of whacks would do any good. A little girl would lean over and whisper into her mother's ear, and the mother would get up, leading the little girl by the hand, and the two would tiptoe out. As the mother passed the windows outside, she would stoop. Then we'd hear the little girl pipe, "Mamma, hurry!" In a few minutes the mother and the little girl would come back from behind the church and softly tiptoe to their seats.

The week before, we would have invited somebody to Sunday dinner and now the people would stand on the front porch and ask if we were sure it was convenient. Ma had been getting ready all week; but the question always had to be asked. Then I would get to ride home with the company. It was a lot more fun than riding with Pa and Ma and having to sit in the back seat. No lecture now.

It was always understood that the company was to drive slowly, so Ma could get the dinner started and Pa could have his team out of the way so he could help the company unhitch. I'd help, too; no hanging back now, and we'd lead the horses to the tank by the windmill while Pa and the company talked crops. Pa would say, "What do you figure your oats'll run?"

When the women heard us, they'd all come to the door and say they'd about decided we weren't hungry, then we'd say we thought we'd eat a bite to keep on the good side of the cook.

We'd go into the dining room and there'd be the table! No red checkered cloth today but a wonderful fine white cloth with faint flowers woven in it. Lying on a chair, which was partly behind and partly beside Ma, was our peacock fan. The fan was about as long as the table was wide, and had a leather loop to hang it up by when it wasn't in use. As Ma waved the fan over the table during dinner, the feathers would catch the light and shimmer and shine entrancingly. During weekdays we had a fan made out of paper, not one-millionth part as grand as our peacock fan. Company and a white tablecloth and our peacock feather fan—that was Sunday dinner!

Milk Standard Can
Be Raised by Flavor

Odor, Flavor and Grade
Controllable by Farmer

Farmers are improving milk at a rapid rate. Grade A milk meets the standards of the certified milk of 30 years ago. In another 30 years the improvement will be even greater. Further advance will be aided or hindered by flavor of milk.

The producer can exclude abnormal flavors and odors from the milk. While it is generally known that wild garlic flavors the milk to such an extent that it will be objectionable, and usually rejected by receiving stations, there are other factors that should be watched.

A rye pasture is capable of imparting to milk very undesirable flavors. Silage and flavor-producing substances should be fed after milking, or not less than five hours before milking. Alfalfa, ladino clover, silage and certain weeds will give flavor to the milk. Common concentrate feeds may be fed before milking. Milk from cows late in lactation or those having mastitis should not be mixed with the regular milk.

Barny milk is one of the most uncommon of all these defects. It is also the easiest to do away. Proper sanitation, good ventilation and clean utensils will eliminate this trouble. If silage can be fed away from the milking barn it will aid in eliminating barny milk. Grains and dry hay in addition to the concentrated foods, are safe to be fed in the barn.

Sheep's New Jobs.

Like many other farm animals, sheep are beginning to come into their own. The U. S. army has found that the sheepskin is the warmest of all furs and an up-to-date tannery has been erected in Australia to make leather of sheep pelts, a product formerly wasted.

The intestines of sheep are used to make surgical sutures. An expensive-looking fur is now being made from wool. The synthetic furs are said to be more durable than the genuine article. The cham-ais skin is made from the skin of sheep. A new wax is a wool product, as is also a vitamin D product.

New processes have been discovered to make wool shrink-proof, non-irritating, wrinkle-proof and sterilized.

Strange as it may seem, wool is not the natural covering for sheep. In the dark ages the wool was a kind of under-fur or down, but was developed by selected breeding.

Storing Potatoes

Cut, skinned or bruised potatoes should be culled out of those intended for winter storage to protect the remainder from long range holding. Vegetable specialists report potatoes dug during hot, sunny weather are likely to rot in storage unless picked up within a half hour.

Skinned or slightly cut potatoes after being "cured" if immediately after digging, they are placed for 10 days in a very moist atmosphere as close to 60 degrees F. as possible, it has been found. A corky new skin will form that is a good substitute for the original, not only keeping out rots but also preventing undue shriveling during storage. After the curing period, the same temperature should be maintained but only a moderately moist atmosphere is needed.

Cottonseed Handling

Cotton farmers and ginner can increase returns from both fiber and seed by preventing field and storage damage of the seed. The cotton should be harvested as soon as possible after the bolls open, should be dry when harvested and should not contain more than 12 per cent moisture when stored or ginned. Weathered and unweathered pickings should not be mixed. Well-dried seed should be stored in tight bins or metal containers.

Coral Sea Divers Easily
Overcome Grip of Octopus

Natives of the Coral sea have very little fear of strangulation in the grips of the monstrous octopus. Usually the octopus wraps its tentacles about the victim's legs, waist or neck and breaking this hold is simple. The native simply grasps the octopus' upper and lower jaws and, with a sudden powerful thrust, turns the mouth inside out. This bursts the ink reservoir, killing the octopus and causing the tentacles to uncoil.

HOW TO PACK AND SHIP FURS FOR BEST RESULTS

When the trapper ships his furs correctly, he aims for speedy delivery, which means quicker returns. Follow these suggestions for best results:

See that all the heavy grease and surplus fat have been removed from pelts so they won't spoil while enroute, either in warm weather or in warm express or postal rooms.

In packing, it is best wherever possible to place skins flat, one on top of another. Never slip one pelt inside of another; the one inside may be overlooked. Don't let grease or skin-side of pelt come in contact with fur-side of other pelts.

Ship furs in burlap or cloth wrapping, or in box with a few holes punched in sides to allow ventilation, which helps prevent spoilage. Never wrap green furs in paper. It prevents circulation of air and is likely to make them spoil. Do not ship furs in air-tight containers.

Follow the illustrations in shipping — always attaching to your bundle any instructions regarding your shipment. Insert them in a sealed envelope carrying first-class postage. Sew or glue envelope to the outside of the package. This applies either to express or parcel post shipping. Make certain your name and address appear on the shipment. Ship by Express or Insured Parcel Post.
